The CLIMB Support Network

“Right away, this group really opened up to each other and let the walls come down. I admired their courage to be so honest with themselves and address personal barriers that had been getting in the way their whole lives.”

Because of this openness, they were able to connect and bond in a really lasting way. The women really problem-solved together with life challenges and are already helping each other with childcare and day-to-day support.

They don’t take these healthy and safe relationships for granted because some of them haven’t ever had that before CLIMB. They really are like a family now, and these are bonds that will last long after graduation.”
